Blind Tigers is built around the lyrics of guitarist Mike Aurand and bassist Rory T. Miller, who formed the group in 2014 with an intent to build worlds around their songs. Their longtime friendship led to the band's formation when the duo discovered Mike's hard-nosed, lo-fi rock influence blends well with Rory's folk-inspired wit to create a sound all their own: full of urgency, atmosphere, and grit.

Jansen van der Spuy joined the group as their drummer in 2016, rounding out the three-piece group as they continue to perform throughout Middle Tennessee and Southern Kentucky. Since Jansen's arrival, the group has become more focused than ever on tackling the tedium and turmoil of modern living in their music, from the realities of gentrification to the horrors that lurk in one's own subconscious.

Their newest project, At the Bomb Shelter, is an intimate look at the group as they perform several favorites live at Nashville's premier studio, The Bomb Shelter. Videos from the EP are available on their YouTube channel.

Blind Tiger's debut single "Marianne" has been featured on Nashville's 102.9 The Buzz as The Local Buzz Cut of the Week, and the band has been spotlighted by prominent Middle Tennessee music blog MidTNMusic.com
